MAGELSEN IS A LIVE MAN

REPORTED ASSASSINATION INCORRECT.

Man Fired at the Vice Consul but Bullet Missed Its Mark—Preparations Made to Enforce Demands on Turkey.

Constantinople, Aug. 28.—It transpired the report that Vice Consul Magelsen was killed is incorrect. An unknown individual fired at him and the bullets passed close to the vice consul, but did not touch him. The wall of Beirut afterwards visited Vice Consul Magelsen, expressing his regrets for the outrage and ordered measures for the arrest of the perpetrator. The error in stating that Magelsen had been killed came from a mistake in the cipher telegram.

FROM MISSIONARY.

New York, Aug. 28.—In response to a telegram of inquiry regarding the reported assassination of Vice Consul Magelsen at Beirut, Syria, Mr. Freyer, treasurer of the board of Presbyterian missions at Beirut, has cabled the Associated Press as follows:

"Beirut, Syria, Aug. 28.—Although the attack made on Vice Consul Magelsen was evidently premeditated, the bullets missed him and he escaped uninjured."

"FREYER."

GOVERNMENT INFORMED.

Washington, Aug. 28.—A decidedly new turn in the case of United States Vice Consul Magelsen at Beirut, Syria, who was reported to have been assassinated last Sunday, developed to night, when it became known the report was incorrect and that although Magelsen had been shot at he had not even been injured. This information came to the state department from a dispatch from United States Minister Lelchman at Constantinople, who said a mistake in making the original announcement was due to an error in transmission of the cipher dispatch from Consul Ravendal at Beirut. In reporting to the minister. The dispatch from Lelchman followed closely on the Associated Press bulletin on the same subject, which had been shown to prominent officials of the government.

The dispatch from the minister was communicated to the president at Oyster Bay. The contents of the telegram were extremely gratifying to the officials of the government here, as it relieves the situation of its extreme tension, leaving room for a peaceful adjustment of the incident.

Acting Secretary Loomis declined to make public the text of the Lelchman dispatch to night, but gave a summary of its contents. As stated in the Press dispatch, it showed Magelsen had been shot at by some person, at the time unknown to the officials, but that he had not been hit. Local Turkish officials were prompt to express their regret at the occurrence and were exerting themselves to apprehend the assassin, but thus far have been unsuccessful. The opinion was expressed that the attempted assassination of Magelsen would probably bring the matter to a focus, the attention of the Turkish government being drawn in this forcible way to a realization of affairs at Beirut and some effort thus would be made to avoid further trouble.

The latest developments in the Turkish situation were discussed in official circles here. The view is held that the denial of the report of the killing of Magelsen relieves the situation of its immediate awkward and embarrassing features, but will not prevent our naval vessels continuing to the east, Lelchman, in one of his dispatches to the department, suggested that conditions were such that it might be well to have some American naval demonstration in those waters. Reports also have come to the government from the missionary interests of the threatened destruction of their property at Harpoot and because of this Admiral Cotton, it is expected, will be allowed to proceed with one or more of his vessels to Beirut. Acting Secretary Darling to night received a cablegram from the admiral dated at Ville, France, saying that he had left that place with the cruisers Brooklyn and San Francisco for Genoa on the way to Beirut.

EARLY REPORTS.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Minister Lelchman cabled the state department he called on the foreign minister again last night and presented the American demands for immediate investigation of the reported assassination of Vice Consul Magelsen at Beirut. The minister of foreign affairs while denying all knowledge of the affair, attempting to discredit the report, upon insistence of Lelchman, promised an immediate investigation will follow and the Turkish government will take immediate steps to find out and punish the guilty.

Lelchman states Macedonian conditions are constantly growing more acute.

In a cablegram to Lelchman last night regarding the report of the American board of missions that an attempt was made to burn the Euphrates college building at Harpoot, Acting Secretary Loomis instructed him to demand of the Turkish government that it take immediate steps for protection of the lives of Americans there.

PRESIDENT INFORMED.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 28.—The president received a telegram from the state department transmitting to him the cabled communication from the Turkish foreign office disclaiming any responsibility for the murder of Magelsen and expressing regret the tragedy should have occurred. President Roosevelt has received a message from Washington confirming the Associated Press dispatch from Constantinople and Beirut which shows the report of the assassination of Vice Consul Magelsen is an error. The president will not countermand the order to Rear Admiral Cotton to proceed with the cruisers Brooklyn and San Francisco and gunboat Machias to Turkish waters. The attack on Magelsen is regarded as an incident which points to the necessity of a demonstration which will have the effect of insuring the protection of Americans in the Turkish empire.

For several hours to day President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hay were in conference at Sagamore Hill. They discussed every suggested phase of the situation in Turkey. At the conclusion of the conference the secretary returned immediately to Washington. The fact that Secretary Hay considers his presence in Washington necessary at this time, is an indication he thinks the Turkish situation serious. He was not expected to return to Washington for several weeks, but developments in the Ottoman empire during the past few days induced him to come to Oyster Bay for a conference with the president, after which it was deemed desirable by both that he should return to Washington at least for a couple of weeks.

It can be said to be the purpose of the president to afford American citizens in the disturbed provinces of Turkey all protection possible. For that reason and for others which may develop in a short time the decision was reached that no change be made at this time in the order to the European squadron. Admiral Cotton will proceed with his vessels to Turkish waters with the idea of safeguarding fully Americans and American interests.

VESSELS SAIL.

Nice, France, Aug. 28.—In consequence of orders from the navy department at Washington, United States, the cruisers Brooklyn and San Francisco, now at Ville, France, will sail this evening for Genoa, where they rejoin the Machias. After coaling at Genoa the American ships will sail for Beirut.

WILL NOT INTERFERE.

London, Aug. 28.—The foreign office informs the Associated Press that Great Britain certainly will not and it is not likely any other power will raise objection to summary action on the part of the United States in connection with the assassination of Vice Consul Magelsen.

REVEALS A RACE WAR

Judge Youngblood of Illinois Gives His Views on the Negro Question.

New Orleans, Aug. 28.—Judge F. M. Youngblood, of Carbondale, Ill., is in New Orleans. In response to an inquiry as to what he attributed the increase in the number of lynchings in the north, particularly in Illinois, Judge Youngblood said:

"To the increase in the crimes that merit lynching among the negro population, I believe that the north is more keenly beginning to appreciate the situation in the south than formerly. It appears to me that the situation between the two races is daily becoming more and more strained and would seem to tend to a future race war, the deplorable effects of which upon the country could not be estimated."

"In regard to equality granted to the negro in the north, I will say that the respectable Republicans and the Democrats have nothing whatever to do with him more than the white people have in the south."

"The Booker Washington incident has caused profound disgust throughout the north and it is generally felt that it has injured the negro more than any recent incident."

REPORTS OF DUN AND BRADSTREET

REVIEW OF TRADE CONDITIONS FOR PAST WEEK

Backwardness of Crops in Some Sections; Damage in Others and Uncertainty of Monetary Outlook Effect Business.

New York, Aug. 28.—Bradstreet says: Trade conditions are still slightly uneven, due to backwardness of crops in some sections, damage reports from others and uncertainty as to the monetary outlook. Fall trade in favorably situated sections compared well with a year ago, while in others the disposition to hold back is manifested. The feeling grows that the iron trade is grounding on the bottom as regards prices and small buying of pig iron is more marked; but there is again some uncertainty seen. Taken as a whole the situation has many elements of strength. What business is doing is of a solid character and in fact any tendency to over extension is conspicuously absent. The cotton trade feels the effect of continued stringency of supplies, but jobbers have found buying very free. Wool is firmer on more moderate demand. Business in spring weights is of good volume with agents and reports from the clothing trade generally are good, the best coming from the west and south.

Wheat, including flour, exports for the week were 3,246,000 bushels, against 5,437,000 last year; for eight weeks of the present year, 25,074,000 bushels, against 36,776,000 in 1902.

CORN EXPORTS.

Corn exports, 88,000 bushels, against 115,000 a year ago; for eight weeks of the present year, 8,325,000 bushels, against 1,554,000 in 1902.

DUN'S REPORT.

There is still no indication of depression in trade and industry that was predicted would follow decline in securities. Conservatism was developed by uncertainty regarding effect upon financial conditions, but legitimate business is able to secure funds as they are required and the more cautious progress of business gives promise of a greater permanent gain. The week's shorts have been disclosed and technical position strengthened, just as occurred in the stock market. Readjustment after a period of inflation must of necessity bring some losses, yet the outlook is brightened by the removal of threatening industrial clouds. Dispatches from all sections testify to liberal trading in all merchandise and a disposition to prepare for a greater consumption of all necessities of life, while crops are making good progress. The number of buyers in New York is increasing and a heavy fall trade is anticipated. Railways are still vigorous purchasers of steel, especially as to rails. There is fair business in plates and in sheet steel. Woollens are quiet and the only event of importance in silks was special sales at low prices.

Failures this week in the United States were 16, against 173 last year.

PARDONS AGED MURDERER

PECULIAR AND PATHETIC STORY OF JOHN LEMLY

Tired of Aged Wife and Elopod With Young Girl—Returns to Wife and Later Kills Lover of His ex-Mistress.

Springfield, Aug. 28.—John Lemly, who was convicted in Massac county in 1886 of murder and sentenced to ninety-nine years imprisonment in the penitentiary, has been pardoned by Governor Yates. Lemly is broken in health and as he is 86 years of age, it is thought that he can live but a few days.

The story of the crime for which Lemly was sentenced to the penitentiary is a peculiar one, presenting both the phases of criminal life, and also a very pathetic tale of an old and almost childish man.

ELOPED WITH A YOUNG GIRL.

Lemly, who was a married man and who had lived in harmony with his wife for almost sixty years, became infatuated with a young girl, sixteen years of age. The girl showed much affection for the old man and he forgot his family ties and ran away with the girl. He soon grew tired of his youthful mistress and after providing for her future, he returned to his home and asked forgiveness from his wife.

The faithful and forgiving wife with whom he had lived for so many years, forgave him for his first offense in all those years, and took him back to her home and love, and everything went along as if nothing had ever come between them until a short time afterward a man named Benjamin Ladd is said to have become attracted by the graces of the girl with whom Lemly had eloped, and he won her affections and left the county with her.

JEALOUS OF MAN WHO WON GIRL.

Lemly then became a changed man, and even at his years he stated that he was jealous of the man who had taken the girl and he immediately started out to find him. When they met Lemly drew his revolver and killed Ladd, and was later tried, convicted and sentenced to ninety-nine years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

After serving some time in the prison Lemly became a trusty with the prison officers and was allowed to go to his home at intervals and finally he began to remain at his home all the time. This was brought before the attention of the courts and the supreme court decided that he must remain in the prison.

When Lemly heard of this decision he walked thirteen miles to Chester and gave himself up to the prison officials, and has remained there since. He is now in such a feeble condition that he cannot live but a short time.

STRANGE CUSTOMS

That Exist Among the People in the Island of San Domingo—An Interesting Letter From the Pen of E. C. Kreider.

The following letter from E. C. Kreider, Jr., who is now located in the province of Azua in the Island of San Domingo, tells in an interesting manner of the life and customs of the people among whom he is temporarily abiding. The island teems with historic interest and was once the home of the great explorer and conqueror of Mexico, Hernando Cortez:

In compliance with a former letter in which I said I would write something about this strange, queer city, I will endeavor to give you as nearly as possible the story of the old town of Azua.

Azua was originally what you might term a sea-port and the present location is over six and one-half miles away from where the city first stood. Next to Santo Domingo, Azua is the oldest town on the island, founded more than 400 years ago.

Azua possesses many interesting sights among them the cathedral, which is built of round stones of all shapes, sizes and colors and the whole covered with a kind of plaster made from rock taken from the sea. I have not yet seen this rock but the plaster is almost as durable as stone and is equal if not better than our finest cement. The church is about the size of Trinity and has about a dozen bells in its tower. Inside the church, the various columns, carved stone pillars and altars were brought direct from Spain and some of them are very beautiful. The church faces the Plaza from the east side and here we note some more interesting sights. The Plaza is about the size of the public square in Jacksonville and has been raised two feet above the level of the surrounding streets and every twelve feet there is a pole with an ancient coal-oil lamp on it and at night the place looks like a torch light company on parade. Every Sunday and Thursday night the Dominican wind jammers make their debut at eight o'clock and for two hours the air is filled with discords from the horns and squeals of the clarinet and the lusty thumps of the drummers. It reminds me not of the "Juveniles." The senioritas and seniors parade up and down and flirt and shout "vivas" to the musicians.

Caste is everything here and is rigidly observed. The men who have any money and own stores let their finger nails grow in order to show that they do no manual labor. This, I think, is an Asiatic custom imported with the Arabs whom the Spaniards brought here to build the walls and churches and fortifications and who were accompanied by overseers.

In going out to the oil field the other day I observed how the laundry is done. On the banks of a stream I saw a woman with a bundle of clothes, preparing to do it. I found out why the buttons disappear from my shirts. She first dipped the various garments into the stream and then rubbed them with the leaves of what looks like our soap weed, and then laid them on a flat rock and proceeded to beat them to a pulp with a broad flat paddle. The weed makes a foam like soap and indeed cleans the clothes and the paddle removes the buttons. The thing here is detachable buttons.

Goats, pigs and the hungriest looking dogs you ever saw throng the streets and run everywhere and it is easy now that I am living here, to see the reason for this, viz: they are the scavengers and are thorough ones at that.

I have not been able to give as much time as I would like to this letter, but will do my best to take up the thread of my story where I left off.

Day before yesterday I stood in the little old shack of a building that once was the office of Cortez, the conqueror of Mexico. This distinguished gentleman was a justice of the peace in this "burg" before he became a soldier of fortune and to go farther, I have seen documents that bear his signature. Speaking of homes I must tell you how the average citizen builds his residence. Whole trees are cut and brought in in the rough and are worked up by the "carpenters" on the spot where the house is to be erected. These trees measure from one and one-half to twelve inches in diameter. First the uprights are squared and set in the ground. These are about three feet apart and are let into the ground about two and one-half feet with about twelve feet sticking out, then the stringers of smaller logs are pinned to the tops and the roof is ready to put on. The roofs are like those on most of our sheds, that is to say like an inverted "V." Next the palm that is put on over the skeleton rafters until the roof is two feet or more thick and warranted to shed water and house every bug and germ that thrives in this climate. Now the weatherboard is put on. This is made from the "Palma grande" and is about the toughest, hardest boards I ever saw. The palms are split into boards and when an expert does the work the boards can be made to fit as nicely as white pine. About the only tools used are a hammer, saw, of very ancient pattern and almost devoid of teeth, and an ax. These people can use an ax better than any one I ever had the good fortune to see. It is really wonderful what they can do with this one tool. The house is now practically completed, as windows and doors are useless here.

Last week I went to get my hair cut and as there is but one "shaving parlor" where tourists hold forth I had no choice but to go in and await developments. While I was waiting my turn I noticed the customs pretty well as they are practiced here in this line. First I noticed that there were only two barbers and four chairs, two something like our chairs at home and two like revolving office chairs.

Next I saw that two victims were having their faces peeled by two big fat Dominicans with razors that look fully two inches wide and resemble "machetes" more than the usual blade. I watched the operations and saw a fellow get the finishing touches. He was handed a basin of water and commanded to wash himself which he proceeded to do. Next he got one end of a bath towel and with the other end the barber mopped his perspiring countenance. Then the customer received a plentiful shower of bay rum, which by the way is 75 cents a quart here, and after that his face was generously powdered with flour. When the man got out of the chair he had the appearance of having been through a "spell of sickness," he looked perfectly gassy. I won't say what happened to me, but will say that I shave myself now.

One would imagine that every European power had one or more "representative" here. The truth is the natives of the small islands in the Caribbean sea have come in here and settled, and are no more German, French, Danes, English or anything else, just plain West Indian natives, Carib Indian predominating. Whatever dependency they happen to be born on they claim they are of that nationality. In consequence each store has its flag-pole and each day sees about all the flags of Europe displayed. This is especially so on Sunday. The Puerto Ricans fly the good old stars and stripes and are as proud as peacocks because they can.

I have just been interrogated by a regular caller, Dominican caller at that, Sr. Don Parde Fritas. This young man and his brother are good friends of mine.

These two young fellows have had a pretty fair education in Europe and some months in the states. They have very queer ideas about America and Americans. As is usual, they think New York is the whole of our country. They ask me many questions and I am, I think enlightening them somewhat on various subjects pertaining to God's country.

Many times since I have been here I have wished for a snap-shot camera, there is so much to get here in the manner queer native customs that is impossible to take with a camera I now have as the natives will not pose for you and the pictures obtained in such manner would not be natural.

When I was going out to the property the other day I could not imagine why I was passing so many people coming in to town. Every burro had two people on him, a man and a woman, and the load was one I would not think of putting on a good horse. Every feast day is religiously observed and the people from the interior country always come to town on these occasions to celebrate. It is understood with the men I employ that the only feast days I observe is Sunday. Sometimes they have two of their holidays in one week and since have been here there cannot be more than twenty days given over to rejoicing. Most of the women smoke long stemmed black pipes and whenever you see a burro caravan coming you will notice the little white puffs of smoke, as the people, men and women alike are inveterate smokers.

Gaudy or bright colors are worn exclusively. Let me tell you I have seen the most wonderful hose worn here that ever was made. For instance a boy of twelve or fourteen wearing short pants had on a pair of stockings that simply beat anything in the color line I ever saw. The stripes ran around and I counted the cardinal colors and there were two or three different shades of each. Talk about "hot box." This youngster had all his friends "left at the pole."

Kite flying is carried on here on an extensive scale, and I really think the Chinese people do not make use of this form of amusement more than the Dominicans. The air is full of fantastic kites every day and some of the designs show much ingenuity.

You would be surprised at the wonderful tone of the native guitars. I have one given to me by a Dominican friend which he said was made by his great grandfather, and must certainly be 100 years old, as the man is every day of 100 himself. The instrument is well made and the tone is as fine as any instrument of the same kind I have ever heard. I intend bringing the guitar home with me when I return.

I will continue with this story and answer your letters which came in a bunch to day and contained so many surprises. I must tell you of a birthday feast I attended. Miss Anita Van Deuller celebrated her twenty-first year on Tuesday of this week and as I knew the family and received an especial written invitation to attend, I went. The feast began at 5 o'clock in the morning and lasted until 12 at night. Great quantities of jerked beef and goat were prepared and every delicacy the country affords was there. Some of the dishes, I'm sure, the cook would have trouble in naming or reproducing, as they were wonderfully and fearfully made. At the time I called the place was crowded, but I was personally taken in hand by the "Matea" and compelled under the circumstances to partake freely of all that was offered. I wonder what a young lady in the United States would think if she had to tell her age every year and go through the experiences that were to an extent embarrassing to even a Dominican dame. The feast continued until the girl dies or gets married, which amounts to the same thing.

The horses are what we would call ponies, and with a few exceptions are native born. Some Cuban horses have been imported and are really beautiful animals. I am riding one now and though I am not able to buy him, as he is not for sale, I am enjoying the use of a very superior animal for a time at least. I get him for his feed. Last Sunday I spent the day with Captain Hardy on his estate, which I have already described to you and upon returning I came in with a team who works on the wharf for the captain. About half way in the man said "We will soon pass the house of a man who has a horse you will admire and the horse has been so wild nobody can ride him." Well, we stopped and went into the stable to have a look at the animal and he was a beauty. The natives I must remark, are very bad horsemen and are afraid as death of an animal that has the least bit of spirit. I told the man and upon that if they would leave me alone with the horse a few minutes I would ride him up to the house. After they had left me and got out of sight, I walked up to "Victoria," as the horse is called, and began petting him. He soon ceased to show any viciousness and I managed in a few minutes to tie my handkerchief over his eyes and then got the saddle and bridle on him. (I ride a Mexican style saddle, the same as is used in the west—two cinches, high back and horn). Then petting and talking to him, I quickly mounted and snatched the handkerchief from his eyes and we were off with a leap and bound that would do credit to one of our bronchos. He bucked and swung round and round, tried to bite my legs and then I began showing him I was not afraid of him. I roweled him several times sharply and I soon had him running like the wind, which, by the way, is a horse's last effort to escape that burden unknown to him before. It took twenty minutes to "show him," as we say, but finally I conquered him and he obeyed every turn of the bridle and quit "acting up." When I rode up to the house the owner told me he had never expected me to ride the horse and he took my arrival on the horse as something little short of miraculous. The breaking of any saddle horse begins when he is a very young colt and for any one to ride a full grown horse, that could not be taught or conquered, seems to be a wonderful feat to these people.

There are several fine sugar estates in the neighborhood of Azua and to a great extent the people here depend upon the money distributed by these estates for labor. Much cultivation is going on now on account of the dry season in the earlier months of the year and in consequence the people of the town are prospering. Man power is cheaper than machinery here; therefore primitive methods still prevail in this line of industry.

There are no amusements here except what I have mentioned, and were it not for the amount of work I have on hand I would get pretty lonesome. The mountains always held a fascination for me and I am spending much of my leisure time tramping over them. Within this concession given the West India Petroleum Mining and Export company are many minerals of much value and there is no doubt in my mind but what time will make this company a very wealthy concern.

BACK FROM WEST.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Reaugh returned Friday from an extended visit in Cripple Creek, Manitou, Denver and other Colorado points. The season has been an unusually pleasant one in the west and the weather delightfully cool. The alfalfa crop promises well and crop prospects generally are good. The mining situation at Cripple Creek has seriously disturbed business and fully 3,000 stores and dwellings are without tenants and both sides seem to be growing more determined every day.

COMES HOME TO DIE.

Waverly, Ill., Aug. 28.—A pitiable spectacle was witnessed on the arrival of the C. & St. L. train from St. Louis yesterday forenoon. Mr. Moffatt of this city, who has been in Colorado for some time for his health, finding his case was hopeless, came home to end his last days here. He was too feeble to travel in the ordinary way and was brought from Colorado on a cot, which was placed in the baggage cars of the train on which he traveled. On the arrival of the train here the cot was lifted from the baggage car and Mr. Moffatt was taken to his home. He is terribly emaciated and can live but a short time.

NOT OVER-WISE.

There is an old allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a snake. This is paralleled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglects to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by all druggists.

SOMETHING GOOD.

This paper can render no greater service to its many readers than to acquaint them with a really meritorious medicine. Re-Go Tonic Laxative Syrup, advertised in these columns is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric and dangerous soothing drops, and is said to be the most pleasant and reliable medicine in use for the quick and certain cure for Constipation and Flatulency. It contains no opium, morphine or other narcotic and stupefying drugs. For children it aids nature in digesting and assimilating the food and insures healthy, natural sleep. Re-Go Tonic Laxative Syrup is a certain cure for all stomach troubles; 25c. 50c. and $1.00 bottles. Sold by Lee P. Allcott, druggist.

CONSUMPTION THREATENED.

C. Unger, 21 Maple street, Champaign, Ill., writes: "I was troubled with a hacking cough for a year and I thought I had consumption. I tried a great many remedies and was under the care of physicians for several months. I used one bottle of Foley's Kidney and Bladder Cure and I have not been troubled since." For sale by J. A. Obermeyer.

ACCIDENT TO M. A. DAVENPORT.

Carlinville, Aug. 28.—Intelligence of another accident which has befallen M. A. Davenport, brother of ex-Sheriff Davenport of this city, has just been received. Mr. Davenport lost his right arm in a threshing machine less than a year ago while traveling for a machine company in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where he now resides, and on last Monday, while driving with a lively man, the team became frightened and ran away, throwing Mr. Davenport from the vehicle and in his fall struck his shoulder, crushing the bone very badly. It was the shoulder of the arm which he lost last year. Mr. Davenport formerly resided here.

Mr. Jessie Phillips, a pioneer citizen of Lawndale, Ill., who is nearly 77 years of age and in his time has used many different medicines, says: "Last winter I used a free sample bottle of Harts' Honey and Horehound for a bad cold and found that it loosened the cough immediately. I then bought a 50c bottle and the medicine cured me very quickly. I consider Harts' Honey and Horehound the best cure for a cold of cold that I have ever used." Old people are urged to try Harts' Honey and Horehound for Coughs, Colds and that stubborn Cough following an attack of La Grippe. 25c, 50c and $1. For sale by Lee P. Allcott, druggist.

A NATURAL RESULT.

It is very reasonable to suppose if the foundation of a structure was removed that the building itself is bound to come down. This same principle can be applied to disease. Take remove the cause of sickness, and the illness leaves of itself. Dyspepsia, Indigestion, sickheadache and biliousness have their foundation in stomach disorders. Remove this weakness and the other symptoms are no more. There is one cure for this that all druggists sell for 25c. per box, it is called Dr. Gunn's Improved Liver Pills. They get right at the beginning of these diseases and make the cure by taking away the cause of it. We will send a small box free by mail, or a large box on receipt of 25c. Address Dr. Gunn, Philadelphia, Pa. For sale by Lee P. Allcott.

Many persons in this community are suffering from kidney complaint who could avoid fatal results by using Foley's Kidney Cure. For sale by J. A. Obermeyer.

SO SOOTHING

Its Influence Has Been Felt by so Many Jacksonville Readers.

The soothing influence of relief After suffering from itching piles. From eczema or any itchiness of the skin.

Makes one feel grateful to the remedy. Doan's Ointment has soothed hundreds. Here's what one Jacksonville citizen says.

Anthony Ward, of 1043 North Main street, says: "For fifteen years I was troubled with a severe irritation on my body and nothing I employed brought good results until I procured Doan's Ointment at Dr. H. Lee Hatch's drug store and used it. The effect was prompt and in a short time the trouble was removed. I had also suffered from eczema on my feet and hands and was treated for it with physicians who could do no good. A few applications of Doan's Ointment entirely removed it. This reliable preparation is a true specific for skin diseases."

READ THIS.

Jacksonville, Ill., Sept. 25, 1902.—Nearly three years ago, with a second attack of serious illness, I was surprised to learn that I had diabetes. Providentially I was led to procure a bottle of Dr. E. W. Hall's Specific for Kidney and Bladder Troubles, known as A TEXAS WONDER. Less than half of the $1 bottle effected a complete and permanent cure. Consequently I believe it to be a medicine of very great value. L. E. Kent, Evangelist.

GOOD OLD DAYS

Regard for Tradition Underscored—The World Improves.

People are often heard to sigh for the good old days of the one-ring circus, but such a thing is impossible nowadays with so enormous a concern as the Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' Enormous Shows, United. Their great tented amphitheatre is so large, in order to accommodate the thousands that attend at every performance, that if the performances were given in one ring it would be beyond the view of a large part of the audience, so that in order all may be entertained three rings and two stages are employed, and in all of them all sorts of acts are performed by the very best specialists in their respective lines of work, so it is that every person, no matter where seated, is at all times within easy seeing distance of some circus specialty of high degree. Some of the features of the show are so great, however, that they cannot be duplicated, and they are presented by themselves. These usually, however, have to be performed high in the air or on the hippodrome track, where they move all the way around so they can be seen in every part of the vast arena. There is no danger that there will not be enough for anyone to see, no matter where they may be seated, in the Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' Enormous Shows United, when it appears here on Friday, Sept. 4.

AT THE BUSINESS COLLEGE.

Hopkins will be in the college office from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., Saturday, Aug. 29, Monday, Aug. 31, and Tuesday, Sept. 1, to consult with those interested in school work.

A MAYOR RECOMMENDS IT.

Mr. Paul S. Fuson, the popular mayor of Lincoln, Ill., writes the following strong endorsement of Re-Go Tonic Laxative Syrup. He says: "I am pleased to say that I have used Re-Go Tonic Laxative Syrup in my family for the past three years and regard it as a medicine of rare excellence for the cure of Constipation, Indigestion and Dyspepsia. The pleasant taste and laxative effect of Re-Go makes it particularly satisfactory for the use of children and delicate women." Samples free. 5c, 50c and $1. Sold by Lee P. Alcott, druggist.

Mrs. Mollie Allen, of South Fork, Ky., says she has prevented attacks of cholera morbus by taking Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets when she felt an attack coming on. Such attacks are usually caused by indigestion and these Tablets are just what is needed to cleanse the stomach and ward off the approaching attack. Attacks of bilious colic may be prevented in the same way. For sale at all druggists.

TO FORTIFY.

The plea of Gen. Fred D. Grant for the fortification of the American side of the Rio Grande will come as a surprise to most persons. The Globe Democrat, General Grant has been stationed in the department of Texas long enough, it is to be presumed, to become familiar with the situation on that part of the country's frontier, and he gives some reasons why he thinks the nation's defenses at that point ought to be strengthened. Mexico is erecting strong forts on her Texas frontier. She has also developed a warlike spirit recently. These are the chief reasons why the general urges the United States to build forts and establish military camps in the department of Texas.

AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS.

The German commissioners who recently visited this country, mainly to study our agricultural processes, were frank enough to show amazement and disgust. They found a general lack of all training and therefore of exact and comprehensive knowledge among the great body of American farmers, who constitute a very large part of the population and whose products are still the chief source of foreign indebtedness to the United States. Even in this age, when science plays a part in the development of our resources, there are men of influence who agree with most farmers that schools for the teaching of agriculture are ridiculous; that the only way to learn about this subject is to work on the farm and that no other knowledge than that which is gained by practical experience can be of any value. The scientific agriculturalist is a subject for laughter to those who call themselves serious and practical farmers. The foreign commissioners found the use of, and also an exhaustive knowledge of fertilizers exceptional in all parts of this country, while in Germany the most productive soils are carefully enriched. Wanton waste they saw on every hand, the consequence mainly of a lack of training in the science of farming. It is strange that a people who are awake to the importance of a thorough education in all other forms of enterprise should assume that mother wit will do in farming.

In our own fertile state some years ago there was a widespread falling off in the yield of many of the most valuable crops. There had been unusual natural conditions, and an appeal was made to the department of agriculture at Washington for an expert investigation. It was from the despised and ridiculed bureau of entomology that the truth was announced. In their enterprising ignorance the farmers had killed off all the crows instead of merely keeping down their numbers and had driven away hawks and owls. Hence the moles and field mice had multiplied unchecked and ravaged the fields. The tree sparrow had been frightened away by the shooting at the crows and the seeds of noxious weeds were no longer consumed, but developed to the point of choking out important crops. The war on the larger birds by the farmers on the smaller birds by the English sparrows had driven away the woodpeckers, nuthatches, cedar birds, warblers, bluebirds and other which protected the fruit trees from borers, sucking and gnawing and other insects, caterpillars and destructive pests generally. A knowledge of what creatures to destroy and what to encourage on the farm is but one small item in the education of the farmer, yet it pays well for the effort to master it.

The proposition that supervisors should be authorized to establish country agricultural schools in connection with the public schools has much to commend it.—Philadelphia Record.

An Expensive Sample.

Colonel Francis G. Ward, now superintendent of public works at Buffalo, was for some years connected with the construction corps of the Panama railroad.

"We had curious handicaps in the work," said Colonel Ward. "All of our material came from France. Once we needed some bolts. We sent a wooden model of the kind we wanted to France and ordered 4,000,000 of them. The bolts came back, but they were all made of wood like the model—4,000,000 beautifully made wooden bolts, of no earthly use except for kindling."—Saturday Evening Post.

IN THE SLEEPING CAR.

Passengers Often Go to Bed and to Sleep with Their Eyes—Glasses On.

A Pullman car porter is authority for the statement that many people sleep with their glasses on, says the Philadelphia Ledger.

"They are people who appear to be in their right minds, too," he said. "When I first made the acquaintance of their tribe I thought they were crazy, but I have found out better since. The first fellow I ever saw bunk up thus accoutred was a politician who traveled over my road frequently stirring up the voters in the western part of the state. The funny thing about him was that he didn't really need his glasses any more than I did. He seldom wore them in the daytime, and generally read the papers and made notes for his speeches with his glasses dangling from his buttonhole three feet away from his eyes. But the minute he got ready for sleep they became indispensable. It bowled me clean over when I bumped into his curtains one night and found him sleeping with the things on. I did not know it was his custom to wear them. I thought he had become so tired out with speech-making and handshaking and baby-kissing that he had temporarily lost his mind and gone to bed with them on by mistake. I was afraid to leave him so, for it seemed a dead certainty that if he should roll over in the night he would smash the things to atoms and perhaps put his eyes out. So I took the glasses off myself. I did it as gently as a summer breeze, but at the first touch the old gentleman was wide awake.

"What are you up to?" he asked.

"Taking off your glasses, sir," said I.

"You went to bed with them on."

"Of course I did," said he. "I always do. I couldn't sleep without them. Give 'em here."

"Since then I have seen lots of other folks who were slaves to the eyeglass habit. The politician wore a plain, cheap pair of reading glasses that wouldn't have been much loss if they had been broken unless the pieces had happened to injure his eyes, but I have seen other travelers with specially prepared glasses. They are provided with hooks and clasps and other appliances to hold them in place, and the eyeglass crank who goes to sleep with a pair of them on can stand all the jolting the roughest road in the United States can give him without their being dislodged. However, the people who take to eyeglasses instead of morphine tablets as opiates have the knack of holding their heads at a safe angle even in sleep, and I have seen few accidents happen to the glasses."

QUIT YOUR WHINING.

Get It Out of Your Voice, or It Will Affect Both Mind and Body.

There isn't anything in the world more disagreeable than a whining person.

He whines if it is hot. He whines if it is cold. He whines at this, he whines at that, he whines at everything. Whine, whine, whine.

It is just a bad habit he has fallen into. There is nothing the matter with him. It is just a bad habit, says Medical Talk for the Home.

The whiner is generally an idle person or a lazy one. What he needs is to be set at work. At real hard work, mental or physical. Some work that will interest him and engage his whole attention and he will not have time to whine.

We know two women. One of them does her own housework and takes care of her horses besides. She is happy and singing all the day long. The other whines all the day long. The whine of her life sounds no whining note. It is a pleasure to be with her, a good, wholesome tonic to watch her.

The other woman is so situated that she does not have to work. Nothing to do but to amuse herself. She has no zest in life, no interest in anything. She is a bunch of selfishness and whines at everything. Whining has become such a habit with her that her most casual remarks are tinged with a whine. She is miserable herself and makes everybody else in her presence miserable. She is a weakling, a parasite. A drag, a heavy weight on somebody all the time.

Get the whine out of your voice, or it will stop the development and growth of your body. It will narrow and shrink your mind. It will drive away your friends. It will make you unpopular.

Quit your whining. Brace up. Go to work. Be something. Stand for something. Fill your place in the universe. Instead of whining around exciting only pity and contempt, face about and make something of yourself. Reach up to the stature of a strong, ennobling manhood, to the beauty and strength of a superb womanhood.

There is nothing the matter with you. Just quit your whining and go to work.

Scalloped Corn.

Butter a pudding dish well; put in a layer of cooked corn cut from the cob, first scoring the grains and then scraping out the pulp, put a layer in the dish; season with salt and pepper; cover with buttered crumbs, or cover with plain crumbs, dotted with bits of butter, then another layer of corn, more crumbs, and continue in this way until dish is full, with buttered crumbs on top. Add a cup of sweet cream and bake for half an hour.—Washington Star.

Steamed French Frying.

Sift two cupsful of flour, two teaspoonsful of baking powder and a pinch of salt. Add enough milk to make a thick batter, beat thoroughly and put a spoonful of the batter into each of six buttered cups. Then add a thick layer of sweetened peaches, fill the cups with batter and set in a steamer over boiling water for 30 minutes. Serve hot with peach syrup.—Home Magazine.

MRS. BITTER'S TRIP.

"The stingiest woman I ever met was in California," said Mrs. Bitter. "Her name was—well, I'll just call her Smith. The Smiths have stood so much that I suppose they can stand a little more. I was visiting in San Francisco and I'd had bad news from my folks back in Massachusetts, so I made up my mind to go straight through to see 'em when I left California. Well, Mrs. Smith heard about it and she came to ask me if I would take Mr. Smith. He was dead and wouldn't be particular.

"I didn't promise at first, for the idea of going around with another woman's husband that way wasn't pleasant, but she came several times and told me such a story about not being able to go herself that I finally said I would do it.

"You see, it's expensive to express a dead body. The cheapest way is to buy a ticket for it. But when you do that some one has to go with it, for, not being baggage there isn't anyone around the train who will do anything with it unless you say so.

"Well, Mrs. Smith bought her late husband a ticket and had her cousin that she don't speak to unless she wants something of him bring the body down to the station in his delivery wagon the night before I started. It didn't cost her anything that way. You see, the body had been stored somewhere while she had waited to find a fool like me who would take it east. In the morning my baggage was sent down early and when I got to the station I saw it on the platform in company with a long box that made the cold shivers run down my back.

"My trunk was heavy. When the baggage man weighed it he said to me: 'Six dollars excess, madam.'

"I began to hunt for my pocketbook. Then I happened to think. 'Hold on,' I said. 'I've got another ticket here,' and I pulled out the late Mr. Smith's ticket. The baggage man laughed. 'I guess you're good for another fifty pounds,' he said. So Mr. Smith saved me $6.

"Finally Mr. Smith and I got started on our trip. Every time there was a change of the baggage car and my car getting separated out I got and went to see that Mr. Smith was being fairly treated.

"When we got to Chicago I wanted to come down to my own home for the night, but thought it was late and rainy I had to take the body over to the other station, ready to start out early in the morning. I felt wild and lonesome that night, looking after a dead man that I had never seen in life and that was no kin to me. I showed my papers and the ticket and the men at the station were kind. Then I left Mr. Smith and went home.

"There were two morning trains that I could take. One at 7:30 and the other at 9. I decided not to go till 9, so that I wouldn't be hurried. But I woke up before daylight, wondering if the remains would get put on the first train anyway, and I grew so nervous thinking about it that I rushed down to the station before I had a bite of breakfast. I got there just in time to see the men that I had talked to the night before all standing round that box and waving to me, thinking I was late. The 7:30 train was just ready to start. I struck out and ran, shouting to them to let that box stay where it was.

"Do you know what those men did?" exclaimed Mrs. Bitter. "They picked up that box and ran with it across four tracks and up about half a block, still thinking that I wanted to catch the train. I saw that there wasn't anything to do but catch it whether I wanted to or not. I had all my things with me and I got on board, but not until I had told those men what I thought of their actions. It wasn't any way to do, running a dead man around like that, and I told 'em so.

"We were to get to Boston on Saturday morning. Well, on Friday afternoon a man came on board and asked if Mrs. Eliza Bitter was on the train. I said I was. He didn't want anything but just to know that I was there. Before long another man came and asked the same question. They were telegraphing from both ends of the line, trying to locate Mr. Smith and me. I began to get nervous, and by this time a third messenger came. I was afraid there was something wrong about what I was doing, and I was sorry that I tried to help that woman out.

We got to Boston twelve hours later than Mr. Smith's people had expected us and they were worried, in spite of their telegraphing. I delivered over my dead man and the certificates and the other things and then those people did something which has puzzled me ever since. Whether they suspected Mrs. Smith or me of goodness knows what, I am sure I don't know, but they opened up that box right there before I left them, and—my goodness!—it wasn't Mr. Smith at all, but another man!

"It was a week before we found out how the mistake was made, and I felt like a body-snatcher all the time.

"It seems that when Mrs. Smith's cousin brought her husband's body to the station that night it was put inside by the baggage men, after he left. When Mrs. Smith came down in the morning she fixed up things for the wrong box, a box that had been brought down early in the morning and left on the platform. The people who moved the other box found out the mistake pretty soon, for they only sent Mr. Smith to Arizona. That stung Mrs. Smith woman had to pay for getting the other man back from Boston and Mr. Smith from Arizona.

"That is the only time since Bitter died that I've had a man to go around with me, and, being dead, he wasn't much comfort. But he helped me carry my baggage."—Chicago Daily News.

Other Engagements will Prevent Governor From Attending Conference.

The following day he will speak to the old settlers of Montgomery county at Hillsboro, and on Thursday of next week he will speak at the Knox county fair at Galesburg.

THREE BLACK CROWS.

Probably every person has heard the story of the three black crows which it was said a man threw up. The story was run down and the man who was supposed to have told it admitted it, except it was two crows instead of three. His informant was limited up and said yesterday only it was one and he referred the inquirers to the man himself, who said it was no crow at all, only something as black as a crow.

During yesterday numerous reports were in circulation regarding a racket at Winchester. It was said that a man running a merry-go-round had struck another man with a wrench and the infuriated people had burned the machine and had lynched the stranger, or were about to do so. On every hand the reporters were asked about the affair and the story grew in proportions as the day advanced. From a reliable source it was learned that the manager of the merry-go-round had stopped his wheel after the usual number of turns had been made and a man reported somewhat under the influence of liquor had refused to get off and the proprietor had struck him on the head with a wrench, inflicting a scalp wound rather troublesome but not dangerous. The culprit was arrested, tried and fined, while the man struck was going around with his head tied up little the worse for the difficulty. The merry-go-round had not been stomped at all and there was little excitement. The previous lynching bees in the history of the capital of Scott led people to believe readily almost any story which might be told.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Yesterday marked the 10th anniversary of the birth of Jimmy Kendrick, son of the well known ex-alderman of the First ward. Jimmy is a regular with his mates, so about two dozen of them executed a grand surprise on him at 2 p. m. and stayed the rest of the day. Of course games and all sorts of good times were enjoyed and Tommy generously treated the boys to ice cream, bananas and lots of nice things, which were much enjoyed. A number of nice presents were received by the happy young host of the day.

THE WAR GAME.

Portland, Me., Aug. 28.—To day's movements in the war game consisted of a fierce engagement, during which a landing party of 1,800 men under Rear Admiral Coghlan, captured all stations and defenses of the cape and surmised. Coghlan believed he had achieved a victory, but umpires decided no landing was effected, as men and boats had been put out of action before the landing was attempted. The last demonstration was made about midnight and the result is not known.

CHAMBERLAIN'S POLICY.

London, Aug. 28.—The Hail has obtained what purports to be an outline of Chamberlain's fiscal proposal. They are said to be a duty of two or three shelling a wheat and heavier duty on flour. Small duties on meat, eggs, dairy produce and equivalent remissions on duty in tea, sugar, tobacco; also two scales of duties on manufactured products of 10 and 20 per cent, with a view to securing reciprocity treaties with foreign nations. The proceeds of these duties are to be devoted to relief of income tax.

NEGROES GOING SOUTH.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 28.—Numerous negroes are passing through this city from the north, emigrating to southern state, where they say they expect to receive better treatment at the hands of the white man. This move on the part of the negro is said to be the result of race riots in northern towns. They seem to be headed for the cotton states.

ARRESTED.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—A dispatch from Denver, Colo., announces the arrest there of William Heram wanted here on charge of securing $20,000 on worthless checks.

SET ON FIRE.

Berlin, Aug. 28.—Buildings on the Prussian crown estate at Dohnheim, near Potsdam, the usufruct of which is enjoyed by Prince Henry, of Prussia, were set on fire by a female servant. Crops and machinery stored in the buildings were destroyed.

METHODIST CONFERENCE.

Several Churches will be Used for the Big Meeting at Quincy.

"Both the Presbyterian and Christian churches will be used for the meeting of the Illinois M. E. conference here in addition to the Vermont Street M. E. church," says the Quincy Journal. "The sessions of the conference and the anniversary and other addresses will be held, if course, in the Vermont Street church. The lay electoral conference will meet Friday in the Presbyterian edifice, where the board of examiners and undergraduates will also have their meetings. The Christian church will be used for the various special committee meetings. The bishop and his cabinet consisting of the presiding elders of the district will meet each afternoon and evening of the conference weeks at the home of Mr. J. H. Clark, 717 Broadway.

"Few people interested in the matter really realize the amount of extra work that has devolved upon Rev. Parker Shields in connection with the meeting of the conference in Quincy. He labors at his study each morning from 7:30 o'clock until 12:30 and then from 1:30 until supper time he is putting in the time seeing his parishioners and friends relative to the placing of the ministers and laymen who will attend the big gathering, the biggest religious gathering, in fact, that Quincy has ever held and in all probability the largest it has in any chance of having again for many years to come. He pastor's correspondence is heavy now, but growing heavier every day.

"It may not be generally known that the Brotherhood of St. Paul has complete charge of all the arrangements for the big conference. This is a fact, however, and the laymen of the congregation are helping the pastor to a very great extent in preparing for the proper reception and entertainment of the biggest Methodist conference in the world.

"The conference that is to be held in Quincy next month is of more than usual interest and importance. In the first place, the lay electoral delegates meet in convention with it. Secondly, delegates are to be chosen and appointed to the general conference that meets every four years. Because of these facts the meeting this year is arousing more than usual interest."

Poetry and Fame.

A new story is going the rounds about Mark Twain and a young poet.

"How long does it take to get fame from a poem?" asked the poet. The sage thought and in a few minutes said:

"Well, it takes about four hours to write one and 10 years 11 months 30 days 24 hours and 55 minutes to get it published! Then it's a toss up whether it's famous or infamous."

EXCURSION TO MT. STERLING.

Next Wednesday there is to be a grand excursion to the great races at Mt. Sterling and there should by all means be a good sized train load on that occasion. There will be a special train all the way and the Wabash with its usual careful attention to the wants of its patrons will see to it that nothing is spared to make the affair a complete success. The fare for the round trip will be but 80 cents and the train will leave the Wabash station at 8 a. m. This will be a fine opportunity to get acquainted with our western neighbors and enjoy a day at the races, which will be first class.

SOLD HER HAIR.

Castine, Me., Aug. 28.—Miss Bessie Smythe, the daughter of a farmer living on the Orland road, in order to raise money for the Union church with which to have it painted and something paid on the mortgage, sold her hair at auction, a Boston merchant paying down $536 cash for it. Miss Smythe's tresses are famous all over the country, as they reach below her heels and are of a beautiful ruddy brown tint. Many summer residents attended the novel auction and bid spiritedly.

THE DEATH RECORD

CRUM.

Mrs. Sarah Crum, widow of the late Abram Crum, died Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at her home in Litterberry. She had been in very poor health for more than a year and her death was not altogether unexpected, as she had been gradually failing.

The deceased was born in Kentucky in 1844, moving to this county with her parents when only a child and since that time she has always lived near Litterberry. She was a faithful member of the Christian church and has long been identified with the works of charity in her town, being always ready to make any sacrifice for a good cause. Her husband has been dead for a number of years and she is survived by one daughter, Mrs. H. B. Baxter, living near Ashland, and one son, Albert Crum, who lives near Litterberry.

The funeral will be conducted from the Christian church at Litterberry Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Interment will be in Arcadia cemetery.

FUNERALS.

PETERS.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Rifena Peters was held at the Portuguese Presbyterian church. The services were in charge of Rev. R. E. Cressey, who chose for his text a part of the fourth chapter of James. The choir consisted of Mrs. James Scott, Mrs. Joseph DeFrates, Edward Marks and J. R. Fernandes. The flowers were many and beautiful, and were in charge of Mrs. Tony Franks and Mrs. John F. Smith. The bearers were Antonio Vieira, John DeFrates, Pat Nunes, A. P. Vasconcellos, Manuel Andrews and George Peters. Interment was in Jacksonville cemetery. That heart so kind, so warm, so true,

Which throbbed with love and tenderness, Has ceased its throbbings here to beat.

In yonder realms of blessedness: O, there it never more shall feel A single pang of aught or pain, But now forever free from earth In perfect bliss it shall remain.

DR. HOWE MAY LEAVE.

Dr. Howe, for six years pastor of the First M. E. church in Springfield, will probably ask the Illinois conference at its coming session in Quincy for transfer to some western church. He will go west for the benefit of Mrs. Howe's health. The question of his leaving was discussed informally at a meeting of the quarterly conference of the church last Wednesday evening. In view of his probable departure a committee, consisting of Messrs. Lee Matheny, S. E. Prather, S. A. Bullard, John T. Capps and Frank T. Kuhl, was appointed to confer with the presiding elder, Rev. A. C. Byerly, at the annual conference in reference to a pastor. This committee has taken no action whatever on the question of a successor to Dr. Howe.

A PECULIAR FIND.

A peculiar find was made this week at the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis station in Virginia. The bridge gang was repairing the south end of the platform and discovered a bunch of rusty tools, which consisted of nothing but drills. They were put on exhibition and were identified by L. R. Simmons, as being the tools that were stolen from his shop fifteen years ago. Those who remember the incident, which caused much talk at the time it happened, will remember also that just prior to this the jewelry store of C. E. Nooker was broken into and robbed. Many other business houses were robbed at the same time and it was presumed the burglars had stolen the tools thinking they would be necessary articles to help them in their work. Finding they were too large for the purpose, it is now supposed that they hid them under the C. P. & St. L. platform to secure them from being found.

MANAGER AT VIRGINIA.

Walter Birkenhead received notice yesterday of his appointment as manager of the Postal Cable telegraph office at Virginia and left on the afternoon train to take up his new work. He has been employed at the local office here under Mr. Henry during the past two months and he has proved himself an efficient and trusty workman.

REFUSE TO TAKE OATH.

New York, Aug. 28.—News was received here that because they refused to take the oath of allegiance to Great Britain, the 70 Boers who were detained in Bermuda as prisoners of war for a year and a half after peace was declared, have been cast adrift. They will come to this city within a fortnight to ask Americans to furnish the funds to take them to the Transvaal.

KAISER MAD AGAIN.

Berlin, Aug. 28.—Dr. Stude, minister of education, has incurred the Kaiser's anger by inducing his majesty to patronize the forthcoming unveiling of the Wagner statue at Berlin on Oct. 1. The Wagner family has also shown resentment at the scheme, inasmuch as the chief promoters are Bouge merchants and others who have brought ridicule on the scheme.

HUMOR OF THE HOUR

Such a Misunderstanding.
 "When I saw that she was almost beyond my control," said the railway engineer, "I threw her over."
 "Brute!" ejaculated a gentleman wearing eyeglasses and grassy whiskers who was unintentionally straining his ears to overhear the conversation.
 "It didn't do any good," continued the engineer, "so I shut her off. But still she was jumping pretty hard and sliding around."
 "Infamous!" said the grassy whiskered man.
 "Sliding around. So I give her air."
 "Ah, then you have some little instinct of kindness," growled the incensed listener.
 "But it wasn't any use, and so I jumped and got away just when she began to smash things."
 "And I don't blame her one bit!" asserted the man with the eyeglasses and the grassy beard. "It's a pity she didn't smash you, so you couldn't come here and boast of your cruelty. I am not surprised at the number of divorces nowadays."—Judge.

The Old House.
 She—A poor tramp stopped at the door today, and I gave him a good meal.
 He—What did you do that for? You're the softest thing!
 She—I just couldn't help it. He reminded me so of you. I asked him if he'd saw some wood for me, and he said he was too tired.—Philadelphia Ledger.

He Feared It.
 "And how is your brother Johnnie getting along in New York, Mrs. Peachy, ma'am?"
 "He's getting along fine, Mr. Barclay. In his last letter he said he was in a skyscraper."
 "That's too bad. I was afraid he'd get in some scrape or other 'fore he'd bin there very long."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Natural Sequence.
 Miss Thirtyodd—John had the audacity to propose to me last evening.
 Miss Twentyseven—Indeed! And when is the wedding to take place?

So Full of Life.
 Mrs. Seldom-Home-Down, Fido!
 Mrs. Jenner Lee Ondego—Don't scold him. He isn't annoying me in the least. I like little dogs. They are so full of life, don't you know.
 At this critical juncture Fido begins to scratch himself with great vigor, and they hastily change the subject.—Chicago Tribune.

Preparations.
 "Young man," said the citizen who makes a specialty of good advice, "go west and grow up with the country."
 "I'm going to do that very thing as soon as I acquire the necessary accomplishments."
 "Can't you ride horseback?"
 "Yes, but I haven't learned to swim."—Washington Star.

The Recreant Lover.
 Bessie—My, but you look woozy! What's the matter? Has Fred broken with you?
 Tessie—Not exactly, but I'm afraid he's thinking of it. Here's two telegrams from him within the last half hour, and in neither one does he say a word about loving me.—Baltimore American.

All He Could Say.
 The Tar—You know the difference between windward and leeward, don't you?
 Egbert—Why, I believe—aw—windward is where the wind comes from, but I—aw—don't just know what comes from leeward.—Puck.

His Future.
 Father—Well, how did you come out in the bean guessing contest?
 Dull Boy—I guessed there was 150 beans in the jar, and there was 9,200.
 Father (sadly)—I'm afraid you'll never be fit for anything but a weather bureau chief.—Youth.

Pat On.
 "She has such a natural charm about her!"
 "Yes, but it is artificial."—Judge.

That's Where They Are.
 Where are the curtains of yesterday?
 The nice little curtains that used to grace the parlor windows, looped and tied with wide white ribbons in their places? Here are those windows. Now, where are those curtains of yesterday?
 Where are the curtains of yesterday?
 Deep in the cedar chest somewhere? Not on your life! They're rustling about setting their bill of summer air.
 Where are those curtains of yesterday? That's where the curtains are working today.
 —Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Jim Crow.
 One afternoon last year my brother saw in the top of a large tree two crows sitting on the edge of the nest. They were feathered out and were about ready to leave their home. So he climbed the tree and brought them down. They soon began to hop around, always wanting something to eat. We fed them meat, as they cared very little for angleworms. As one was inclined to be cross, we decided to keep only one.

A great many of our friends told us if we split his tongue he would talk, but they could not say that they had ever heard one talk, so we did not do it. We taught him to say "Hello!" and "How do you do?" quite plainly. When he was angry he would scold away at us with all his might. We kept a cup at the well on purpose for Jim, and when he was thirsty he would come and rattle the cup. We would come at his call and fill it up for him. When he had drunk all he wished to he would never fall to tip the cup over and watch the water run out on the platform of the well.

He delighted in carrying things off whenever he could get a chance. When we gave him angleworms he would fly upon the top of the house and stick them under the shingles.
 In the morning he would fly up to my brother's room and sit on the window sill and call until he awoke him.
 One morning late in the summer we missed our Jim. We called and called, but no Jim came to get his breakfast, and we saw him no more. We think that he must have been killed, as it was too early for the crows to migrate. —Genevieve Parker in Housekeeper.

Game of "Squeals."
 This game is something like blind man's bluff, and if the day is a rainy one and the room a large, empty one and the players merry and many so much the better. The catcher is blindfolded and occupies the center of a circle formed by the rest of the company, who clasp hands and dance around, while the catcher recites these lines:

"I must catch my pigs and put 'em in the pen,
 I must catch my pigs and put 'em in the pen,
 I must catch my pigs and put 'em in the pen."

For 'tis market day in the morning.
 As the last word is spoken the moving ring stops short, and the catcher puts out his hand and selects his pig. This one clutch is all that is allowed. Then the catcher says:

"Hold! Before I make my choice,
 I would hear my captive's voice."

The person caught gives a squeal, and if the catcher cannot guess to whom the squeal belongs the captive is set free, joins hands with the others and the game begins again. If the catcher fails three times running to make the right guess he is out of the game entirely, but he is allowed to name his successor, who steps at once to the center, is carefully blindfolded and the game goes on.

Not Basting Threads.
 An industrious little junior who is in the habit of going into the sewing room and asking to help mamma is generally set to work pulling out basting threads. She is a wise mite, only six years old, and the other day enjoyed a visit from her aunt. She was being entertained by the latter in the hammock, when all at once she cried out:

"Oh, Aunt J., put your head down on my lap, so I can pull the basting threads out of your hair. Your head is full of them."

The child was really hurt when her aunt laughed at her, and not until she had been convinced that the supposed basting threads were gray hairs was her word healed.

Giving Aunt Solitude.
 Small Ethel's aunt had many cares and was often heaped to sleep for solitude—just an hour of rest and solitude a day would be to her a priceless boon.

"Aunt," said Ethel suddenly one day, "when I am real rich, when I have millions of dollars, the first thing I will do will be to hire a real soldier with a real gun to stand and guard your door so you can have all the solitude you want. I will pay him $1,000 a week."

Aunt expressed her appreciation of the arrangement.

"But, aunt," added Ethel in a sadly reflective tone, "I just know I will be the first person to get shot."—New York Tribune.

His Idea of It.
 Johnny's mother believed that pineapple was not wholesome for little boys, so the lad never ate any of the fruit until he visited his aunt. When it was put before him he looked at it with suspicion and then cautiously tasted it.

"Do you know what it is?" asked his aunt.

"I think," answered Johnny, evidently satisfied that he liked it, "that it is wooden lemonade."

A Young Financier.
 Aunt—A penny for your thoughts.
 Little Nephew—I was thinking that if I kept quiet, and pretended to be thinking you'd wonder what I was thinking about and say just what you did. Gimme the penny.

Stumpy.
 Poor Stumpy was a tallish dog. Of pedigree unknown.
 He came to live with us because of kindness we had shown.

He loved to play around with us outside and in the hall.
 But there was just one little maid who loved the best of all.
 And when Stumpy would him out And he would sit and wait.
 "Poor Stumpy," said that little maid, "Is crying for a tail!"
 —Anna Temple.

A TICKET AGENT'S TROUBLES

He Was Much Harassed Because He Didn't Know a Man by the Name of Gorilla.

A young man called up a ticket office the other day. "What's the fare to Baltimore?" he asked, relating the Quintus News.
 "We haven't any round-trip tickets," answered the voice from the other end. "What's the fare one way?"
 "Ten dollars."
 "Then the round-trip would be $20, wouldn't it?"
 "Yes, sir."

"Well, it would be fair to presume, that it would be, don't you think?"
 "Can't take anything for granted these days."
 "Seems to me you railroad people don't know very much, or if you do you don't care to tell it."
 "Sorry you don't like us."

"I don't."
 "Tell you what, old man, don't you travel by railroad any more; take a canal boat. They're always handy, and they say some of the mule drivers are very polished gentlemen. Good-by."

"Good-by."
 Vacation times are not the happiest days that are spent by the clerks in a railroad ticket office. Sometimes their patience gives out, and no one wonders much.

Yesterday, for instance, an elderly woman wanted a ticket to Laurel. "Maryland or Delaware?" asked the ticket seller.

"I don't know. Just Laurel. Ever so many people go there. My nephew lives there. His name is Peters. He's an undertaker. I suppose you know now which one I want."

"No, madam, I can't say that I do. Suppose you go home and find out which state your nephew lives in. It will be quite the safest way. No use starting off on a wild-goose chase."
 "But you sell my nephew tickets about once every three months," persisted the woman. "If you think, I am sure you will remember him. He has a red mustache and one front tooth is gone. He is going to have it put in the next time he comes to Baltimore, but if you've ever seen him you surely must remember him. Are you the only person who sells tickets at this window?"

"I am not."

"Well, then, if you'll just call the other people who do, I am sure one of them will know him. He is about your build, only a little taller, and with gray eyes."

"The other gentlemen are not in."

"Then I'll wait for them."

"But they are almost certain not to know him."

"Yes, they will. Peters is well known."

"Very good," said the ticket agent, wearily, "wait, then. They will be here within the next ten hours."

But the woman walked out, grumbling.

The ticket seller isn't always the most amiable of men, but he has some reason for his tempers.

WASHERY COAL.

Small Sizes of Anthracite Reclaimed from the Old Banks of Culm.

To a person living in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania the large culm banks scattered throughout the region elicit no particular comment, as most of these banks have stood in the position they occupy to-day for several decades and are characteristic of the field. But to persons passing through this section, notably for the first time, these immense piles of coal and refuse excite expressions of interest and usually comments as to the unsightliness of these disfigurements of the landscape, says Mines and Minerals. However, many of these banks represent considerable wealth, as they contain large quantities of the smaller sizes of anthracite so popular among manufacturers for steaming purposes. What are known as the small sizes of anthracite—pea, buckwheat, rice, barley and culm—in varying proportions are being reclaimed from culm banks, deposited in mining operations of former years. These small sizes were being thrown out upon the refuse bank previous to 1866, at which time chestnut was the smallest size of coal shipped to market. About 1867 pea coal was utilized as fuel; ten years later what is known as No. 1 buckwheat was prepared and it was not until 1895 that rice, or No. 2 buckwheat, barley and culm were shipped. Prior to the times stated a large percentage of this valuable coal was consigned to waste banks, and to-day witnesses such a demand for this grade of fuel that annexes are in operation or are being built to many of the breakers in the Lackawanna field, where the large sizes of anthracite are prepared dry, and washeries specially designed to reclaim the merchantable coal from the old culm banks are to be seen throughout the anthracite region.

A Taster of Wit.

"Tenors," says Mr. Floersheim in the Musical Courier, "are not usually renowned for wit. There are exceptions, however, and one of them seems to be the Vienna-tenor Slezak, who must be gifted with an epigrammatic style particularly well adapted for the composition of epigrams." One of the Berlin theatrical agents recently sent him a wire with an offer for a few appearances in Berlin at a very low remuneration. The telegram said: "Offer you two musical theatre royal opera, Slezak, 'Transvaal'; honorarium, 600 marks (about $125); honorary airfare;—Wien; upon the return used the bank for the return answer by filling it out with the short reply: 'Honorary airfare secondary affair, money affair principal affair.'—Slezak."

EXHIBITION OF THE GORILLA.

The late Paul du Chailu, the explorer, was singularly observant, vivacious and sunny-tempered. His death is reported to have followed upon over-exertion at a festival in Russia, where he taxed his strength too far in dancing with the peasants, says Youth's Companion.
 Mr. du Chailu had many claims upon the gratitude of the scientific world, and many more upon that of the youthful readers of his tales of African adventure. To them he was preeminently the man who made us acquainted with the gorilla.
 "Everybody knows about gorillas now. The lad who longs to become a mighty hunter dreams of them along with lions and elephants. Their pictured hideousness is familiar in books of natural history; their habit of advancing upon their foes roaring and beating upon their hairy chests with a reverberation like a drum appeals to the fullest imagination. It even replaces satisfactorily that other reported habit so long believed and so reluctantly relinquished to the realm of myth, of hiding in treets till some unwary native passed beneath, then lowering a dreadful hind leg, clutching him round the neck with finger-like toes, and dragging him up to be devoured. Gorillas are not less ferocious—but they are none the less ferocious on that account. Few beasts have an uglier disposition."

His first account of the gorilla in its native haunts was received by scientists and the public alike with incredulity. Du Chailu's book was ridiculed; his lectures were ill-attended, and even his stuffed gorillas were not accepted as having been once real and living. Of one of his early appearances in Boston, he said, whimsically, to his friend, Mr. James Jeffrey-Rocher: "I tell you, Jeffrey, they didn't believe me much then. I hired a hall on School street to lecture and show my trophies; and the people who did not go to see them said I had no real specimens. As a fact, I had more gorillas on the stage than there were people in the audience."

The undaunted explorer, however, made no complaint, hurt and indignant as he was; he simply went back, studied more, explored more, brought back fuller and finer specimens, observations and photographs. Of course he was bound to succeed in the end, and his second return was a triumph.

No man was more perfectly fitted than he to explore many savage tribes, for his courage, tact, gentleness and genuine kindness and consideration made friends among the most difficult.

MOSQUITO PLANT AT BASIL.

Known for a Long Time in Farther India as a Universal Remedy for Malaria.

The mosquito plant is, it appears, no new discovery. Sir George Birdwood, the distinguished physiologist, physiologist and botanist and oriental authority, sends an interesting letter on the subject to the London Times. He says that this plant and allied basil have been known "from time immemorial" throughout India as a defense against mosquitoes and a prophylactic in malarial districts. The Hindus recognize several species, such as "wild Tulsi," "white Tulsi" or "black Tulsi," "Krishna-tulsi," and Tulsi par excellence. One or other of these basil is found growing everywhere in India, especially about temples, and most of them are grown in gardens.

IT MOURNED THE GORILLA.

Readers the World Over Indebted for This to the Late Explorer, Paul du Chailu.

The late Paul du Chailu, the explorer, was singularly observant, vivacious and sunny-tempered. His death is reported to have followed upon over-exertion at a festival in Russia, where he taxed his strength too far in dancing with the peasants, says Youth's Companion.
 Mr. du Chailu had many claims upon the gratitude of the scientific world, and many more upon that of the youthful readers of his tales of African adventure. To them he was preeminently the man who made us acquainted with the gorilla.
 "Everybody knows about gorillas now. The lad who longs to become a mighty hunter dreams of them along with lions and elephants. Their pictured hideousness is familiar in books of natural history; their habit of advancing upon their foes roaring and beating upon their hairy chests with a reverberation like a drum appeals to the fullest imagination. It even replaces satisfactorily that other reported habit so long believed and so reluctantly relinquished to the realm of myth, of hiding in treets till some unwary native passed beneath, then lowering a dreadful hind leg, clutching him round the neck with finger-like toes, and dragging him up to be devoured. Gorillas are not less ferocious—but they are none the less ferocious on that account. Few beasts have an uglier disposition."

His first account of the gorilla in its native haunts was received by scientists and the public alike with incredulity. Du Chailu's book was ridiculed; his lectures were ill-attended, and even his stuffed gorillas were not accepted as having been once real and living. Of one of his early appearances in Boston, he said, whimsically, to his friend, Mr. James Jeffrey-Rocher: "I tell you, Jeffrey, they didn't believe me much then. I hired a hall on School street to lecture and show my trophies; and the people who did not go to see them said I had no real specimens. As a fact, I had more gorillas on the stage than there were people in the audience."

The undaunted explorer, however, made no complaint, hurt and indignant as he was; he simply went back, studied more, explored more, brought back fuller and finer specimens, observations and photographs. Of course he was bound to succeed in the end, and his second return was a triumph.
 No man was more perfectly fitted than he to explore many savage tribes, for his courage, tact, gentleness and genuine kindness and consideration made friends among the most difficult.

Known for a Long Time in Farther India as a Universal Remedy for Malaria.

The mosquito plant is, it appears, no new discovery. Sir George Birdwood, the distinguished physiologist, physiologist and botanist and oriental authority, sends an interesting letter on the subject to the London Times. He says that this plant and allied basil have been known "from time immemorial" throughout India as a defense against mosquitoes and a prophylactic in malarial districts. The Hindus recognize several species, such as "wild Tulsi," "white Tulsi" or "black Tulsi," "Krishna-tulsi," and Tulsi par excellence. One or other of these basil is found growing everywhere in India, especially about temples, and most of them are grown in gardens.

In farther India especially they are planted upon and about graves, and a decoction of the stalks and leaves is a universal remedy in cases of malarial fever. Sir George Birdwood says that when the Victoria gardens and Albert museum were established in Bombay the men employed on these works were at first so pestered by mosquitoes and suffered so much from malarial fever that, on the recommendation of the Hindu manager, the whole boundary of the gardens was planted with holy basil and any other basil at hand, on which the plague of mosquitoes was at once abated and fever altogether disappeared from the resident gardeners and temporarily resident masons. The site of the gardens had before been one of the worst malarial-stricken spots on the island of Bombay. No one in those days knew anything of the mosquito-malaria theory. Sir George himself used myrrh as a protection against mosquitoes. They never, he says, came near any bed in which a little myrrh was burned or a little tincture of myrrh sprinkled when retiring for the night.

ALLIGATOR'S BREAKFAST.

Mr. Bird Spinks was awakened the other morning by a strange, grunting noise in his room, which proved to be the voice of a medium-sized alligator that was warming itself in the alligator ashes of his fireplace, and incidentally trying to swallow his boots, which he had placed there to dry, and which he had bought on the installment plan, and on which he had made but one payment.

The saurian had succeeded in swallowing one boot, and had the other down clear to the straps, which Mr. Spinks, seized and pulled out. The gator is now on exhibition at Minche's drug store, but will soon be slain, in order that Mr. Spinks, who is going around with one boot and one slipper, may recover the other boot.—Adams (Ga.) W. A. Bates, assistant superintendent of the Prudential Insurance company of this city, and his assistants, C. E. Turley, F. L. Ogle and Jason Johnson, of Chapin, went to Springfield Thursday to attend the annual banquet of the Prudential employees in the Springfield district. In the afternoon several addresses were made by prominent officials of the company, touching on matter of interest concerning the insurance work. Superintendent Pape, of Chicago, made a most excellent talk. In the evening occurred the annual banquet at the Leland hotel and a large number sat down to the tables. After the spread a number of toasts were responded to and C. E. Turley, of this city, was called upon for a talk, he having written the largest amount of business in this district. The local force returned home Friday.

CLEVER SCHEME

A. L. Metzger Claims to Teach Railroaders by Mail.

Because H. L. Metzger, a young man of East St. Louis, was endeavoring to turn an honest penny by instructing men to become railroaders by means of his "school of correspondence," he must face the grand jury at the next term of the United States district court.

United States Commissioner Browning held Metzger to the federal grand jury in the sum of $500 on the charge of using the mails for a scheme to defraud. It is alleged that Metzger advertised inducing parties to believe they could secure employment in various positions on railroads by sending him money for his course of instruction. He alleged in his circulars he had secured positions for fifteen hundred men in two years, while the federal authorities charge he has been only engaged in the scheme for two months and had not secured a position for any one. He sent the applicants a circular giving instructions as to the duties of railroad men in various departments, train signals, etc., and concluding by stating that after mastering the pamphlet they should apply to railroad officials for a position and if upon examination they passed they would be given a position.

It is said that Metzger has been taking in about $50 per week by his little scheme. He is about 23 years of age, and his office is in his bedroom.

AUTO IN FLAMES.

An automobile made by the Stearns Steam Carriage company of Syracuse, N. Y., arrived here Friday morning. It was being operated by Chaffeur Ben Hollenbrink on West College avenue Friday afternoon, when a drip cup on the "Yellow Ghost" became filled with gasoline through a failure in properly tightening some of the bolts in putting the machine together and the flame from near the boiler ignited the gasoline in the drip cup. This caused an explosion that for a few minutes brooded dangerous consequences, as other parts of the machine were covered with oil which caused the flame to run over them, and for a minute it appeared as though the entire steam carriage was ablaze. But the timely shutting off of the gasoline valves and the procuring of a bucket or two of water from a residence nearby averted further damage and the machine was running again in half an hour none the worse save a little scorching of the paint for the experience.

In the second round Osborne led by the same score. The latter increased his lead in the third round and is the final round won the match by a total score of 7 up and 6 to play.

This afternoon beginning promptly at 1 o'clock Professor Tollifson will play the best ball of Osborne and Ayers until 3 o'clock. There will doubtless be some fine golf played in this contest, although the grounds are not in condition for low scores.

RELATIVES INFORMED.

LaCrosse, Wis., Aug. 28.—News that Vice Consul Magelsen was uninjured was conveyed to his brother, Rev. H. G. Magelsen, of this city to night, and to his parents at Highland Prairie, Minn. They were rejoiced at the news. Arrangements were made for a family reunion and thanksgiving services will probably be held in the Norwegian Lutheran church here and at Highland Prairie.

ONLY ONE MORE DAY

Street Fair and Corn Carnival Closes Tonight—Horse Show Had a Good List of Entries and Some Fine Animals Shown.

The rain of Thursday evening was certainly a great benefit to growing crops and the street fair attractions came out of the drenching Friday morning as bright and fresh as ever. The ground was so dry that it soaked up the moisture rapidly and after a few hours of sun the park was fit for pedestrians and there were no mudholes or mushy places. All day Friday the same inducements were offered and the shows, both free and pay, proved as popular as ever. The crowd was not equal to that of Thursday, but the park was filled with people all the afternoon and many of the shows did a good business. In the evening the square and side streets were brilliantly illuminated and the air resounded with the stirring music of the Markee band. A big attendance is expected to day, as the dust has been laid and the usual Saturday crowd will undoubtedly be greatly augmented. To day is the last chance to see what you haven't seen and to try your luck at the many curious devices that are on exhibition for the amusement and fun of anybody and everybody. "A Voyage to the Moon," an electrical show, operated by Messrs Thomas Allen, and Thomas Scott, of this city, is one of the best in the park and attracts a very large attendance. Sunday morning will see Central park deserted and the work of cleaning up will begin Monday.

The Bucklin-Darnaby company go to Jerseyville from here and will show there during next week. Only one more day and the screech of the miniature steam engine will no longer be heard, musicians will have ceased beating the tom toms and sounding the gongaw and the music of the merry-go-rounds will no longer float softly through the air beguiling young and old alike.

The summer quiet has been broken, people are returning from their summer visits, the schools and colleges will soon be open and the activity in business and social circles that usually accompanies the coming of fall will be soon here.

THE HORSE SHOW

Great Interest in Exhibit of Gentlemen's Double and Single Drivers.

The horse show scheduled for Friday morning was postponed until 3 o'clock in the afternoon. It proved to be an unusually interesting event, a large number of the best animals in the county being entered.

The first event was the show of saddlers, free-for-all, which called out some fine animals. The first prize was captured by J. B. Corrington, of Alexander precinct; second, J. W. Woods, Jacksonville. The judges were Bert Way, Virginia; W. H. Crum, Litterberry, and Henry Scott, Franklin.

The second event was the show of carriage teams. The first prize was taken by the fine bay team owned by Col. J. R. Robertson, while the second went to the beautiful browns of O. Shuff.

In the single driver contest, first prize went to C. A. Boston; second, Col. J. R. Robertson. In the harness ring the judges were C. F. Corrington, George Massey, Ashland; and Henry Scott, Franklin.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 28.—Mrs. Alexander Winton, wife of the well-known automobile manufacturer, committed suicide early this morning. She has been suffering from nervous prostration for some time and had been in the care of a trained nurse. About 3 o'clock this morning the nurse fell asleep and Mrs. Winton left her beautiful home on Lake avenue, went to Lake Erie, on which the grooms face, and jumped in. Her body was recovered.

THREE GIRLS DROWNED.

Pittsburg, Aug. 25.—Three young girls were drowned and a young man, a brother of two of the dead girls, narrowly escaped the same fate about 2:40 this morning. The girls lost their lives in Girty's Run, in Evergreen suburb. Their bodies have not been recovered. The dead girls are Miss Mabel Scott, aged 20; Miss Agnes Scott, 18, and Miss S. Moore, 20. They were returning from a social gathering and in the darkness their horse slipped, throwing the occupants over a bridge into the stream. John Scott was badly injured, but managed to escape.

PHYSICIAN HAD FAILED.

My boy when four years old was taken with colic and cramps in his stomach. I sent for the doctor and he injected morphine, but the child kept getting worse. I then gave him half a teaspoonful of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and in half an hour he was sleeping and soon recovered.—F. L. Wilkins, Shell Lake, Wis. DELAWARE JUDGE

Speaks of Lawlessness Before the Peace Congress.

Mystic, Conn., Aug. 28.—Chief Justice Lore, of Delaware, speaking before the peace congress to day said, in part:

"Lawlessness pervades the land, unrest and discontent brood over apparent prosperity. We have become the money center of the world, but this has bred a feverish appetite for gold with all its vulgar accompaniments. Coronets and coats of arms are eagerly sought by sons and daughters of late hucksters, butchers and blacksmiths. Law has degenerated into lawlessness. We would call a halt upon our country to its present height of frenzied speculation. Plants worth only thousands of dollars are by magic of watered stocks and glittering advertisements, swollen into a millions. Gigantic frauds are palmed upon the people as successful business enterprises. Our greatest financiers are racking their brains to circumvent the law and people by lawlessness to achieve wealth, being careful only to keep outside of actual violence and the common jail. When their cunning evasions of law are crowned with success all men are tempted to lawlessness. Captains of industry, how much of unrest, mob violence and labor troubles of the times have been bred and fostered by your methods?"

Referring to lynching, Justice Lore said that only the states are exempt for the stigma and that less than a third were for outrages of negroes upon white women. He denied the cause of lynching was delays upon the part of courts. Lawlessness can only be eradicated by virtue backed by education and enforced by implicit obedience to law.

FIGHTING BARBERS' UNION.

Findlay, Ohio, Aug. 28.—Jacob Simon, who as a result of repeated refusals to unionize his barber shop in this city, has received several notices to leave town and has otherwise been annoyed. Yesterday he leased one of the largest and most centrally located business rooms in the city, in which he will open a non-union barber shop with twenty-five chairs. He will shave for 3 cents and cut hair for 7 cents. He says he will either go broke himself or break up the union.
